Introduction:

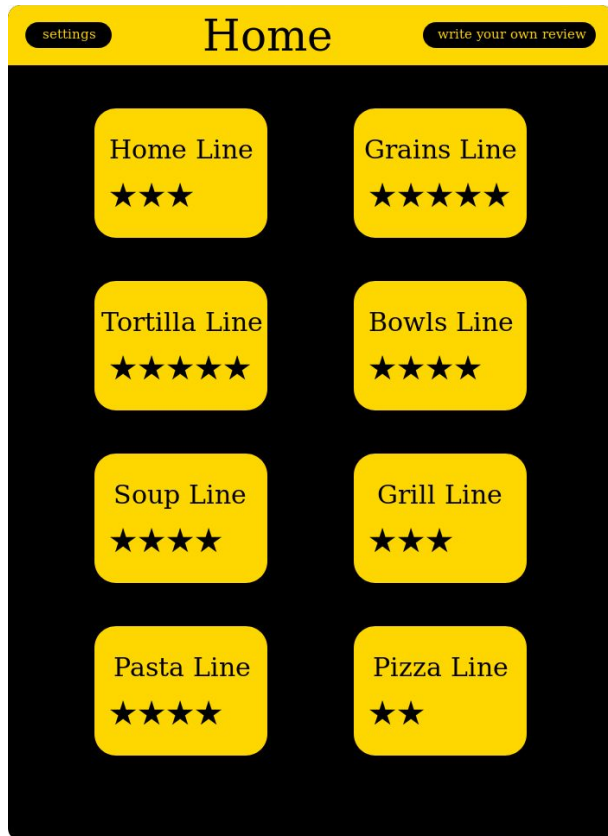

Welcome to CafRate! This application is intended for St. Olaf students, faculty, and visitors, to aid their food choices in Stav Hall, and to help to minimize food waste by stopping people from getting meals they won't enjoy. CafRate allows people to rate different meals being served in Stav Hall as well as view other people's reviews. CafRate is easy to use, lightweight, and can run on phones or computers. The interface is simple and self-explanatory but if you are ever confused, you may refer to this manual.

Basics:

Login Page

This is the login page. It has 2 text input boxes and 2 buttons. The text input boxes are used by students or staff at St. Olaf, to be able to input their username and password. The buttons are to identify visitors from the St. Olaf community, one being "LOGIN" and the other being "I AM A VISITOR." Visitors can't rate meals, but this still allows them to view student and staff reviews. From this screen, after clicking one of the two buttons, the user is sent to the following screen.

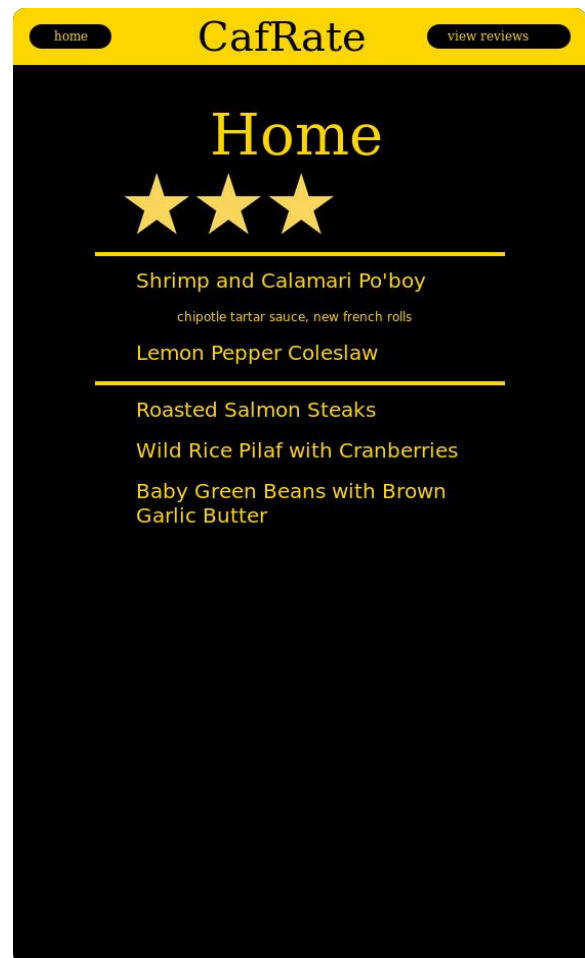

Home Page

This is the home page, showing the different food lines in Stav Hall, and each line's overall rating. The user is able to click on any one of the lines, and it will send the user to a page that displays the current menu and overall rating for the line. If the user is a member of the St. Olaf community, there is an additional button in the top right corner, if the user wants to rate and review a specific line. This button does not exist for visitors.

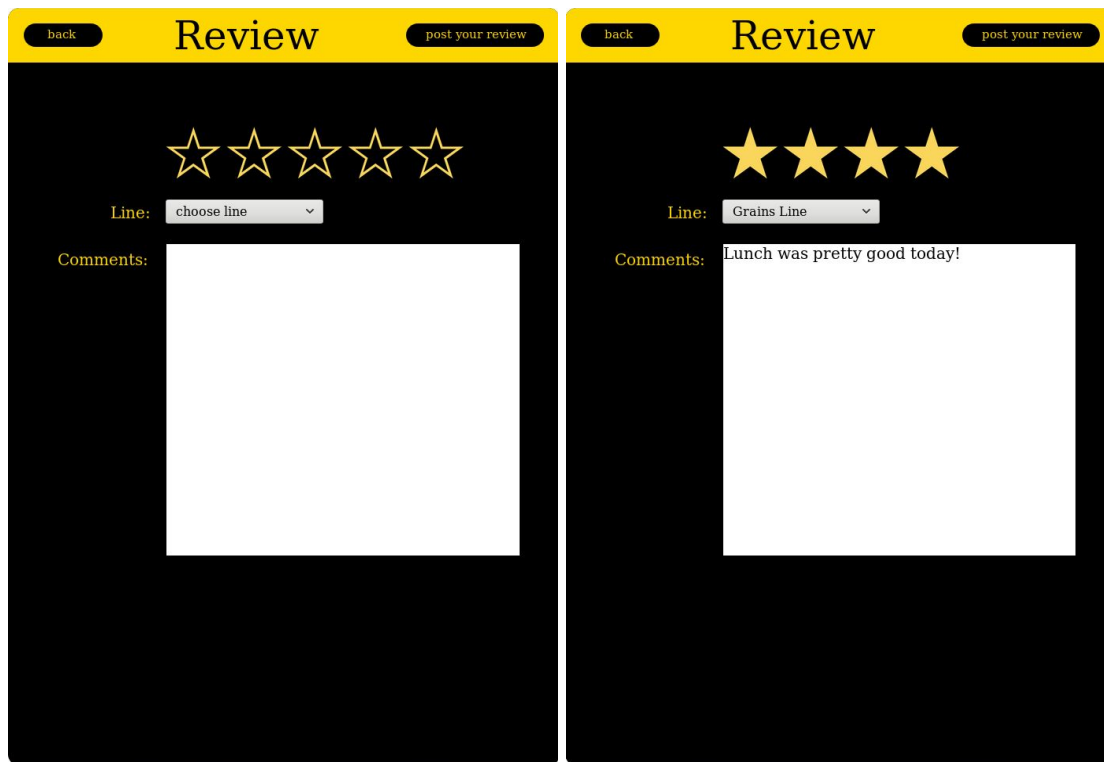

Viewing Each Line

Once the user selects a line, they are sent to a page showing the current menu options for lunch and dinner, as well as the average rating for the line overall. Additionally, there are 2 buttons at the top of each line page - a button that takes the user back to the home page (called "HOME"), and another to view all reviews, called "VIEW REVIEWS." For example, if the user selected home line, the following page would look like this:

Adding Reviews

This section is for St. Olaf students and faculty only. On the home page there is a button in the top right corner called “WRITE YOUR OWN REVIEW”. This sends the user to the review page, which looks like this (the second image shows a review completed but not submitted):

The image displays two side-by-side screenshots of a web form titled "Review". Both screenshots have a yellow header bar with a "back" button on the left and a "post your review" button on the right. The form itself has a dark background.

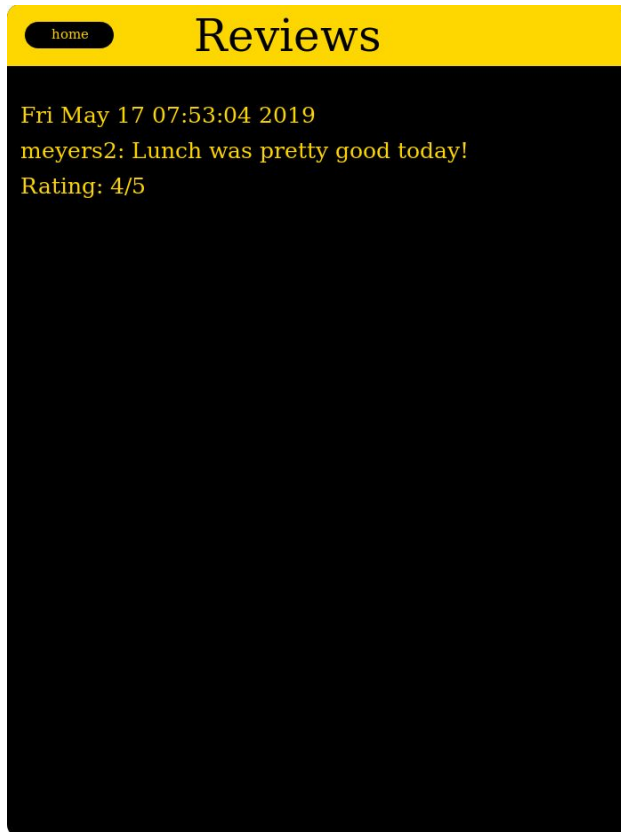

Left Screenshot (Initial State):

- Five empty yellow star icons are displayed in a row.
- Below the stars, the label "Line:" is followed by a dropdown menu showing "choose line".
- Below the dropdown, the label "Comments:" is followed by a large, empty white rectangular text input box.

Right Screenshot (Completed State):

- Four filled yellow star icons are displayed in a row.
- Below the stars, the label "Line:" is followed by a dropdown menu showing "Grains Line".
- Below the dropdown, the label "Comments:" is followed by a large white rectangular text input box containing the text "Lunch was pretty good today!".

This page displays 1 text input box, 1 drop down menu, a star rating, and 2 buttons. The star rating is self-explanatory, allowing the user to select the number of stars the meal/line will receive. The drop down is below the star rating, and allows the user to select the specific line they would like to review. The text box allows the user to input any comments the user would like to share about their experience. Finally, there are two buttons at the top of the page, one to go back if the user decides they don't want to write a review anymore (called “BACK”), and another called “SUBMIT,” letting the user post their review to the website. Once their review is submitted, the user will be sent back to the previous page, where they can see their review posted.

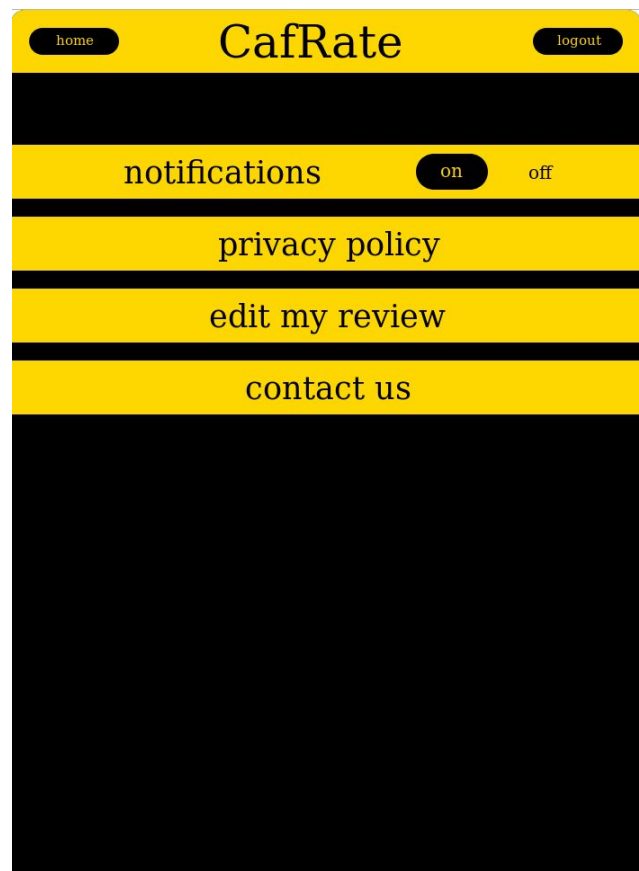

Viewing Reviews

The settings page displays toggle buttons for turning notifications on and off, as well as buttons to access our privacy policy, ability to edit their existing reviews, and contact us. There's also an additional 2 buttons at the top of the page, one to take you back to the home page, and one that allows you to logout.

Settings Page

The user can access the settings page from the Home Page. The settings page displays toggle buttons for turning notifications on and off, as well as a button to access our privacy policy, a button to allow the user to edit their existing reviews, and a button with our contact information. There are also an additional 2 buttons at the top of the page, one to take you back to the home page, and one that allows you to logout. The logout button sends you back to the login page, and then allows you to log in as a different user.

Privacy Policy Page

This page displays our privacy policy. You may view this page in order to better understand that we do not collect or sell data but since we are not security experts, data may not be secured.
